

ZACKARIAH JAQUES

from Donald L. Haynie

ZACKARIAH JAQUES, a son of Zackariah Jaques and Mary Maria Naylor, was born March 22, 1818, in Baddesley Ensor, Warwickshire, England.

On November 28, 1841, he was married to Sarah Clower (or Clewer), in Foleshill, Warwickshire, England. To them were born five children, all of them being born in Foleshill, Warwickshire, England, except for Mary Ann, the oldest, who was born in Coventry, Warwickshire, England, and who died as an infant.

Zackariah and Sarah were average people, being very good and industrious. They heard the Gospel preached by the early Elders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who had been sent to England for that purpose. The date they were baptized as members of the Church is not known. However, in 1852, Zackariah left England for America where he expected to find work as an engine winder, to earn the money required for passage for the rest of the family.

Zackariah arrived in St. Louis, Missouri, where he found work. It was at this time that cholera, a dreadful disease, was raging throughout the frontier country. Zackariah contracted the disease and died, leaving Sarah and their four living children in England to make their own way.

Zackariah Jaques is buried in St. Louis, Missouri.
